Semitic languages

The seven groups of Semitic languages are shown in different colours.
 There is not clear distinction between Aramaic and Cananaean in the earliest known documents.
 Some of the languages listed are more likely to be dialects, notably in the Aramaic group.
 Broken lines reflect ancient languages still used.

Hebrew History

1. In the beginning, there was only one language in the world.
2. After the Babel tower, numerous language suddenly appeared in the world.
3. Hebrew language is one of the languages after the Babel tower.
4. Hebrew language started around 2000 BC.
5. The term 'Hebrew' was a ethnics name given by local people for immigrant Abraham's clan. (Gen14:3,39:14)
6. Hebrew is a member of Canaanite language.
7. Canaanite language is the language of Canaan (Semitic) family.
8. Canaan is the son of Ham, the second son of Noah.
9. Canaan is mentioned early before the Babel Tower (Gen9:18). Canaanite language is likely the language of Noah, the closest to the language of Adam.
10. The Canaanite languages continued to be everyday spoken languages until at least the 4th century CE. Hebrew is the only living Canaanite language today.[1]
11. The Canaanite languages, or Canaanite dialects,[1] are one of the three subgroups of the Northwest Semitic languages, the others being Aramaic and Ugaritic. [2]
12. Hebrew died out as an everyday spoken language between 200 and 400 AD, but remained in continuous use by many Jews since that period, as a written language, a read language and by many people a spoken language as well. It was primarily used in liturgy, literature, and commerce well into modern times. Beginning in the late 19th century, it was revived as an everyday spoken language by Jews in Palestine and Europe as Zionism emerged as a political movement and Jews began moving to Palestine in increasing numbers, and it became the lingua franca of the growing Jewish community there. After the State of Israel was established, it became the main language of the country. Although different dialects of the language were used in earlier times, mostly it is the same Hebrew language. Hebrew is the only Canaanite language that is a living language, and the most successful example of a revived dead language. [3]
13. The biblical Hebrew and modern Hebrew are different.

Significance

Hebrew once died out as an everyday spoken language between 200 and 400 AD. It's the only language survived without state for more than two thousands years in the world. -- it is a language full of the power of life.

721, 586 BC: Israel was defeated by Babylonian and Persian.

70-120 AD: The holy temple was destroyed by Roman.

May 14th, 1948: Re-established; Hebrew is the official language.

Hebrew is one of the oldest languages still in use for today -- the living fossil testifying the Bible the everlasting Word of God.

Hebrew is a member of Canaanite language. Canaan is mentioned before the Babel Tower in Genesis (9:18) -- it is likely the closest language used by Noah, Adam and Eve, and a likely language ever used by God and Jesus.

The Masoretes and the Masoretic Text

Between the 7th and 9th centuries A.D, a group of Jewish scribes called the Masoretes added vowel signs (nikkudot), cantillation symbols and accent marks (ta'amim) to the text. This process came to be known as the Masorah (tradition). The marked text was called the Masoretic Text and became the standard text for the Jews around the world.

Hebrew Masorete Accents Marks

These accents, inserted by the Masoretes (c. 500–1000 AD) have three functions:

1. to indicate whether a word should be joined to or separated from the following word;
2. to mark the accented or “tone” syllable; and
3. to indicate a word’s melody for singing (cantillating) the text.

Note: You do not need to memorize the names of these accent marks; however, when you see one of them in your reading of the Tanakh, accent the syllable where the mark appears (for example, the silluq in the last word of the pasuk (verse) tells us to accent the pretonic syllable: ha-a-rets).
